VT AJ Bell Income Q3 2021 Report

As of 30/09/2021

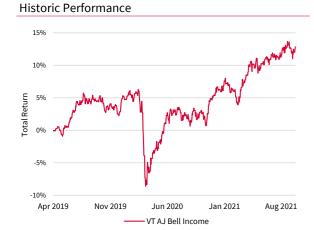

Commentary

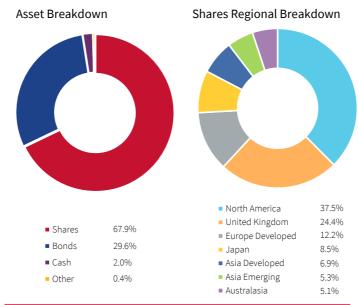

The third quarter of 2021 saw a reversal of recent trends, and a tilt from so-called value stocks to those with favourable growth expectations and quality of earnings. With so many uncertainties around the strength of the global economic recovery, investors sought safety in these well-run companies that have strong earnings.

This was reflected in bond markets, too, which saw a flight to longer-dated, investment-grade bonds over the quarter. Despite fears of 'stagflation' – when the economy can't keep up with runaway inflation – bond prices stayed relatively stable, leading to a small, negative total return.

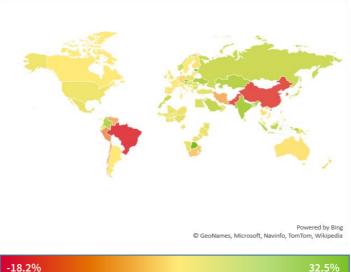

In the Income fund the majority of holdings are shares, meaning much of the distributed return is generated through the dividends of companies. These are globally diversified, and include an element of inflation-protection. The fund returned 1.3% over the quarter, leading to a 12-month return of 10.4%.
